Public Works and Infrastructure Minister Sihle Zikalala met with the South African Council for the Project and Construction Management Professions (SACPCMP) at the Departmental headquarters in Pretoria on 28 September 2023.

The SACPCMP was established to regulate and promote specific built-environment management professions. This includes overseeing the professional conduct of registered persons, to ensure the protection of those who use the services of registered persons, and the quality of work in the industry provided by registered persons.

The meeting primarily revolved around the development of a special dispensation framework for the registration of professionals. "We are committed to ensuring transformation in the process, putting an end to gatekeeping and focusing on the inclusion of black and African professionals," said Minister Zikalala. The meeting also addressed the importance of enhancing capacity, training and the quality of professionals, in order to maintain the highest construction standards and prevent any compromises in this regard.
