Today marks the historic day of the inauguration of South Africa's President under the 7th administration. President Cyril Ramaphosa has taken his oath of office at the Union Buildings in Pretoria and is now officially sworn in as the country's president.

This auspicious occasion was attended by heads of states from all over the continent. Among those who attended the inauguration are: Head of the Swazi Royal family and Ngwenyama of Eswatini, King Mswati III, King Moshoeshe III, King of the Zulu nation Isilo Samabandla Onke, King Misuzulu kaZwelithini; former Presidents Thabo Mbeki, Kgalema Motlanthe and former Deputy Presidents Dr. Phumzile Ngcuka, Ms Baleka Mbete and the current Deputy President Paul Mashatile. A number of national and international media houses were also well represented at the inauguration.

Dozens of South African citizens also graced the Union Building's South Lawns to witness the inauguration that featured a fly past in honour of the President.
