

Why can't we see what's in Nkandla report?

■ WHAT a pompous fool Mathole Motshekga is. Why is it misguided for taxpayers to want to know what is in the Nkandla report?

But not to worry, the ANC will soon ramrod the secrecy bill through Parliament. Then the public will be kept in the dark concerning all the ANC's graft and corruption.

UNEVEN HANDED

■ THE report on the Nkandla expenditure is now out, but we are not allowed to see the detail.

Obviously, it has to be a cloak-and-dagger approach because, as usual, the government has to hide the truth!

Irrespective of the detail and the merits of the findings, the question is whether the president knew about the astronomical amounts involved.

If yes, Jacob Zuma must be very stupid to allow such expenditure to be incurred. He should immediately have stopped it.

If he knew and did not stop it, he is certainly a hypocrite, because on the one hand he spends so freely, and on the other he speaks of "fretting" about the "plight of the poor".

If he was not informed, then at least the minister responsible should be fired.

TRUTH SLIPS

■ THE Nkandla debacle now seems to be directed at state funding. Obviously, that must be pursued. The lies of state officials must be exposed.

What must not be forgotten is that President Jacob Zuma contends he spent a lot of money on acquiring the property and some of the buildings.

Where did that money come from? From a state president's salary?

If there were donations, how much were they and who donated funds? Were these funds declared to SARS and was donations tax paid?

Zuma once said that a mortgage was obtained for the Nkandla compound. In order to register the bond the borrower must own the property. That is the usual situation.

Who owns the property? I recall having read that it is not Zuma!

So, what is the truth?

LASTING TESTAMENT

■ THE report released by the minister of public works says that Jacob Zuma did not use any public money to build his compound in Nkandla.

This bears testimony of what kind of a leader we have! What kind of government approves security upgrades to the tune of R206 million?

What kind of leader would sign off such expenditure while there are children who share one tap in a school, and where teachers who have to share the same toilet with pupils?

This goes to show how irresponsible Zuma is.

MONEY TRAIN

■ OUTA should focus on and demand the obviously dodgy details of the Sanral contract and follow the money trail, including looking into the overseas and local bank accounts of the cadres involved because that will prove that usual government corruption is alive and extremely well.
