The Presidency has denied that renovations at the expense of taxpayers are being undertaken at President Jacob Zuma's private homestead in Nkandla.

This comes after a report in the Sunday Times saying millions more of taxpayers' money would go towards refurbishing Zuma's homes. It said the Department of Public Works confirmed the new upgrades to the president's private homestead in Nkandla and that the upgrades would run into millions.

The department said processes were under way to repair shoddy workmanship and address security concerns for a second time. - TMG Digital/TimesLIVE
