

Old medication in front of the theatres. It is a big health issue.

CALLS FOR INVESTIGATION INTO DE AAR HOSPITAL RELOCATION

DE AAR – There is a call on the MEC of Health, Fufe Makatong, to launch an investigation into the relocation of the De Aar Hospital from the old building to the new facility.

This comes after Dr Isak Visser, along with councillors and a representative of the ratepayers association, last week conducted an oversight inspection of what remains of the former hospital and found it in a terrible state.

It looks as if staff hurriedly vacated the old premises. The group of visitors discovered confidential patient files and x-rays scattered packets of condoms, as well as medical supplies, hospital gowns and even medical waste, in the form of disused syringes, finger prick needles and drip bags, can be found abandoned in the old facility.

Aside from what has been left behind, the building itself is in a terrible state. Not only has it been vandalized but it is also being carried away, bit by bit, with the roof already having been disassembled in certain parts.

The MEC Makatong needs to see for herself in what state her department left this building. She also needs to hold management accountable for what was left behind, as this does not just pose a threat to patient confidentiality but is also a health risk and further contributes to wasted resources.

There will also be a query submitted to the Roads and Public Works Department, who is the custodian of all state buildings, to establish the fate of the old hospital and to ask why government is allowing the building to be torn down brick by brick.

It is unacceptable that state property has been willfully neglected in this irresponsible way - the community of De Aar deserves better.

Part of the roof at the old hospital has already been vandalized and stolen.