

Traffic lights a must

I am again appealing to BCM or relevant authorities for traffic lights at the crossing next to the SPCA and the department of public works in East London.

That crossing is very busy, especially in the mornings. We take our kids to school and other people are rushing to work. So in the morning it's just crazy.

In 2016 I suggested that we need robots there before a big accident happens.

There are no traffic officers to control the flow of traffic. Some motorists are impatient and drive recklessly.

There are contractors that take children to school, and imagine if those poor kids are involved in an accident because no one seems to care. Please, BCM, take this matter seriously.
