

Indaba transforming by breaking barriers

FORMER minister of public service and administration Ngoako Ramathodi is to join Public Works and Infrastructure Minister Patricia de Lille at the Council for the Built Environment's (CBE) third national Transformation Indaba on October 9 and 10 in Pretoria.

The theme for this year is "Breaking the Barriers" and aligns with the government's priority areas such as economic transformation and job creation in the sector.

The council was appointed to regulate the South African built environment sector.

In his State of the Nation Address this year, President Cyril Ramaphosa outlined that his administration would also focus on improving the education, skills and health sector, consolidate the social wage through reliable and quality basic services.
