Public Works warns of fraudsters

The Department of Public Works has warned the South Africans to open their eyes as fraudsters have increased their unscrupulous methods of tricking unsuspecting people to part with their hard-earned money. The fraudsters normally fraudulently advertise jobs, falsely claiming they are at the Department of Public Works and Infrastructure. Unsuspecting job seekers are prompted to send their application to a website bearing the name of the department but it has a slight difference from the official site. Applicants are requested to deposit money for purported verification fee and to make deposit via cell-phone generated money transferee known as E-wallets and supermarkets like Spar, Shoprite, Pick 'n Pay, etc they the fraudsters would disappear.
