Construction of the new Home Affairs office in the KwaDukuza CBD.

Construction slows to a crawl

If the speed of construction at the new Home Affairs office in KwaDukuza is anything to go by, service is going to be dismally slow.

Originally set to open in February, the Public Works and Infrastructure department has pushed out the new deadline to November.

The current Home Affairs office on Hulett Street, located in Global House, has long been a bone of contention for residents. The building's long staircase is a significant challenge for the elderly and the disabled and there are no toilets on site.

In his budget speech, Home Affairs minister Dr Leon Schreiber highlighted the KwaDukuza Home Affairs as one of the projects the department urgently needed get back on track.
