On-Screen Annotation during a presentation, write, draw and annotate on-screen using the built-in annotation overlay. Should be able to plays any document, image, audio and video file directly from the USB.

2.2 Interfacing, Switchers and Control

As a standard, DPWI require 2 different types of popups in our rooms, one should have a touchscreen interface for switching and control of AV equipment built into the lid, and others should just have a plain lid. These that don't have the touch panel built in should have the same design as those configured with the touch panel for aesthetic purposes and to drive adoption. The Popup must be customizable with various connectivity options to be selected and change as needed and once populated the way we want it to be, it should still have additional slots available to accommodate future growth, and these need to be blanked out. The Popup should have a top surface black anodized in colour.

As a standard, All Signals being distributed from the Source (Laptop) Input point, whether it be in a table popup, or as a wall plate input needs to be distributed via a HDCP-compliant twisted pair transmitters for digital transmission of video, audio, and control signals to a minimum of 230 feet (70 meters) over a single shielded twisted pair cable. All the transmitters and receiver must support being locally or remotely powered by the transmitter to eliminate the need for additional power supplies.

Seeing that we are catering for a wide variety of inputs on the table, we would need the connected device to always be scaled to the Native resolution of the display.

2.2.1. Modular Table Popup

These popups must be configured with a fall through Plate to accommodate HDMI, VGA with Audio and a Mini Display port cables. It should also include a modular plate which consist of 2 female USB A to 2 female USB B on a 10" pigtail cable. Of these two USB inputs, one will be used for future interactivity with the touch display's on the walls from a person's laptop, and the other as a direct input into the local PC in order to allow for presenting from a flash drive. The popup must also include a single 3 Pin RSA power outlets located within the popup.

2.2.2. Modular Touch Control Table Popup

The popups with the built in 7" flip-up touch panel should support Power over Ethernet, 802.3af, which should be the connected power source for each touchpanel. The touch panel should provide a light sensor located on the top bezel of the touchpanel that automatically adjusts the LCD screen's backlight based on available ambient light. Device shall have the ability to be controlled by an Apple iPad as a secondary point of control if needed in the future. Energy-saving features must include the ability to adjust the sleep timer that puts the touch panel into sleep mode, and a motion detector should wake up the touch panel. The Popup must provide an integrated lid switch which can be configured to automatically wake the touchpanel when open and can trigger any other system functions.

2.2.3. IP Enabled Control Processor

Provide an Ethernet-enabled control processor for the purpose of remotely controlling, monitoring and troubleshooting connected AV equipment and AV systems. The controller should have a minimum of two bidirectional RS-232 serial ports with software handshaking, one bidirectional RS-232/RS-422/RS-485 serial port with hardware and software handshaking, and two IR/Serial ports for one-way control of external devices if needed. The Controller must provide a minimum of four digital I/O's on captive screw connectors that can be configured that can be used to interface with devices such as sensors, switches, LEDs and relays. It must supports popular BMS – Building Management System protocols, such as BACnet, KNX, and DALI. The controller should ideally have an integrated three port network switch to allow for easy connection of touch panels or other network controlled devices that should support 10/100/1000Base-T.

2.2.4. Touch panel Controller

A 5" wall mount 800x480 resolution and 16 million colour touch panel with a capacitive glass touchscreen needs to be supplied. The touchpanel will be mounted in a landscape orientation but must have the capability to be mounted in a portrait orientation. The touch panel must support PoE, which will allow the touch panel to receive power and communication over a single Ethernet cable. It should also have a Light sensor which will adjust screen brightness as the ambient room lighting changes. Energy-saving features must include the ability to adjust the sleep timer that puts the touch panel into sleep mode, and a motion detector should wake up the touch panel.

2.2.5. Keypad

The Proposed Keypad should be an easy-to-use Ethernet controller designed for handling common AV functions such as power, input switching, volume control, and Ethernet control of AV devices. It should also have a minimum of 2 x bidirectional RS-232 ports, 1 x

IR port for connecting up to two emitters, 1 x digital input and two relays for controlling room functions. The Keypad should have a minimum of six customizable and configurable buttons, together with a volume control knob. The Keypad must support PoE, which will allow it to receive power and communication over a single Ethernet cable. It should also be able to be mounted into a standard two-gang junction box.

2.2.6. Small Boardroom Scaler / Switcher

The integrated amplifier should be a convection cooled mono power amplifier delivering 100 watts rms output power at 70 volts. The Amplifier must meet the ENERGY STAR Audio/Video specification and must be a Class D rated amplifier. A separate amplifier can also be proposed if the proposed switcher does not come with a built in amplifier, but still consider this as 1 unit. The Unit also needs an RS-232 port to enable the use of serial commands for integration into a control system. The Unit needs to have Auto-switching capabilities, to allow for simple, unmanaged installation. When multiple inputs are active, the switching priority should be configurable.

2.4.3. Digital Signage Platforms

The digital signage solution needs to be capable of public, private as well as hybrid cloud deployments. Our requirement is that of a hybrid cloud solution where the platform needs to be capable to accommodate multiple organisations and groups all to be managed from a single interface. The hosted platform needs to offers our business full data redundancy and disaster recovery, which includes the access, compute, storage, switching and network layers. The hosted storage environment should also include a second and full layer of duplication, which is housed in a vendor neutral data centre more than 20km from existing primary data centres. The storage network must have a full active-active design, meaning that data centres are active at the same time and have full fail over between each other. Communication between the primary hosted platform and the on-site platform will be provided by Public Works. The server specifications need to comply with the digital signage software requirement both in the hosted as well as the onsite environment. The solution needs to be scalable as our need grow for additional displays, but for a start it should be capable of serving 50 displays at a minimum.

DPWI would also need software per onsite server that would facilitate designing our content, and scheduling our content.

The digital signage solution provided shall support a viewer type that can be installed on existing client desktops and laptops in order to support high-priority messages actively presenting themselves to the user. For example - on existing check-in desktops this application allows informing the staff on any urgent messages or upcoming events so they can guide and inform the passengers better. The product shall support LG WebOS, Samsung SSSP2 and NEC Android OPS modules

2.5 Boardroom Booking, Monitoring and Central Audio Recording

DPWI would like to deploy an entire IP-enabled room control systems throughout all the rooms indicated in this tender. The reasoning behind this is to have the power to proactively service, support, and justify new build-out projects or product expenditures based on real usage statistics.

DPWI would then require a powerful AV system management software solution to tie into these IP enabled controllers, which will give our AV and IT support teams the agility and flexibility to access usage data, create reports, and control the system from any computer on the LAN or WAN. In an example application, a schedule could be configured to turn off all of the displays in an entire building at 22:00. Or, a specific monitor could be configured to send an e-mail or text message alert when any projector exceeds 2,000 lamp hours.

Seeing that most of the rooms have been designed not to have racks in the rooms we have decided to specify a central audio control system, which will be hosted in the server room. All rooms that require audio recording needs to transmit its mic and line level audio in the room over Danté to the central server. From the controller in the room we need to be able to start and stop a recording, and potentially automate the solution to start recording automatically. We also require any recorded audio to be played back in any room through the audio system in the room, be it the built in speakers of the display or the wall or ceiling mounted speakers. We would also like the functionality to be able to broadcast an emergency audio message to any Danté enabled room if needed.

In order to have all of these functionalities and to create a standard user interface which should drive adoption, as well making it easier to maintain all these products under an SLA, we have identified the following requirements which each product in the chain should adhere to.

2.5.1. AV Resource Management Software

The software should include a SQL-based data repository system for logging device and room data. Data should be gathered and time-stamped for use in preparing management reports. The software should feature a comprehensive collection of reports covering network connections, device usage, and AV equipment inventory. These Reports can be used to maintain inventory lists, track and analyze device and room usage, and proactively plan maintenance activities to reduce system downtime.

Controlling access to the software for multiple users should be made simple through Active Directory integration and the creation of customized user roles. The software supports authentication using Windows credentials and allows the administrator to specify roles which determine the features each user may access. For example, a role called "Administrator" may offer a high level of functionality, but limit access to a specific city or building. A "Reporter" role could limit functionality to report creation and allow access to only a specific department, building or floor.

The Supplier needs to provide a product commissioning service in order to ensure a trouble-free system installation. Prior to installation, the engineers will need to evaluate the server and network where the software will be installed. Commissioning services will include software installation review, project file upload assistance, and final system testing.

To streamline the management of individual rooms, Global-Viewer Enterprise combines multiple tools such as room control, device control/status, webcam, and calendar into one, easily-accessible view. In addition, interactive representations of the keypads and touch panels should allow intuitive control and visual confirmation of the system status.

The software should support Third-Party scheduling integration. More specifically it should supports seamless integration with Microsoft Outlook® via Microsoft Exchange®, allowing instant access to room availability and the power to schedule meetings, enhance room usage reports, and even override scheduled display shut-offs automatically. Which brings us to our next requirement.

2.5.2. Room Scheduling Touch Panel

DPWI require a touch panel with a minimum size of 5” to be placed outside of our boardrooms. These panels needs to display a room’s meeting information and availability, as well as the ability to make on-demand reservations from the touch panel, computer, or any smartphone or tablet that connects to Microsoft Exchange The touch panel also need to display the room availability and a timeline view of the room’s status for the rest of the day. These touch panels should provide easy integration with Microsoft Exchange 2007, 2010, and 2013 for convenient scheduling right from Outlook. In addition to a customizable touch panel interface, the touch panel should also have bright LEDs within the bezel in order to provide at-a-glance room availability status from down the hall. These panels should have the ability to be mounted on various surfaces or ways, such as on-wall, in-wall, as well as secure mounting to almost any flat surface, including glass or granite. These touch panels should have PoE, allowing the room scheduling touch panel to receive power and communication over a single Ethernet cable, eliminating the need for a local power supply.
